DRAFT SAFEGUARDING OF WORKERS (MACHINERY AND WOODWORKING MACHINES) (REVOCATION) (JERSEY) REGULATIONS 201-

REPORT

The draft Regulations provide for the revocation of the Safeguarding of Workers (Machinery and Woodworking Machines) (Jersey) Regulations 1967 (the “current Regulations”), which are considered to be obsolete and outdated.

The legal duties under Part 2 of the Health and Safety at Work (Jersey) Law 1989 (“the Law”), provide effective legal controls for the safe use of machinery in the workplace. The introduction of both the Approved Code of Practice on the Safe Use of Woodworking Machinery, which came into force on 1st July 2011, and the Approved Code of Practice on Safety in the Use of Machinery, which came into force on 1st March 2014, provide guidance on the application of the legal duties under Part 2 of the Law enabling the current Regulations to be revoked.

Financial and manpower implications

There are no financial or manpower implications for the States arising from the adoption of the draft Regulations.

Explanatory Note

These Regulations revoke the Safeguarding of Workers (Machinery and Woodworking Machines) (Jersey) Regulations 1967.
