Questions submitted by Ministers and Assistant Ministers – ruling by the Bailiff

The Deputy Bailiff advised the Assembly of the following ruling which had been made by the Bailiff in respect of questions submitted by Ministers and Assistant Ministers –

“Although there may have been exceptions in the past, a convention has arisen in which Ministers do not ask questions of other Ministers in Written or Oral Questions, nor do Assistant Ministers ask questions of their own Minister. There are good reasons for such a convention which include:

1. The purpose of formal questions in the Assembly in Standing Orders is to seek information or seek official action. Both of these purposes are directly achievable by Ministers by direct interaction with Ministerial colleagues or in the Council of Ministers and by Assistant Ministers by direct interaction with their Minister; furthermore, Assistant Ministers are able to obtain information directly from civil servants in their department;
2. Question time is also an important parliamentary tool in holding Ministers – and thus Assistant Ministers – to account. If Ministers are permitted to ask questions of Ministers that practice will reduce the time available to members who are not Ministers (or Assistant Ministers as the case may be) to hold Ministers specifically and the Government in general to account;
3. Indeed, it would theoretically be possible to load the time available for oral questions with questions posed by Ministers which would prejudice the ordinary scrutiny of the Government and Ministers by non-executive members.

It is also to be noted that the recent changes to the States of Jersey Law, albeit not yet in force would also suggest that such questions are inappropriate. Under the new legislation, Ministers are part of a single Government of the island and presumably as members of the corporation aggregate either have the information already or are able to obtain information directly from Ministerial colleagues.

The Bailiff believes the matter should receive consideration by PPC in consultation with the Chief Minister but in the interim proposes to act in and conduct approval of questions and question time in accordance with the established convention.

Accordingly the ruling of the Bailiff is that until such time as Standing Orders are amended explicitly to permit them to do so, Ministers may not ask questions of other Ministers and Assistant Ministers may not ask questions of their own Ministers.”
