DRAFT NON-CONTRIBUTORY PENSIONS (REPEAL) (JERSEY) LAW 200

European Convention on Human Rights

The President of the Employment and Social Security Committee has made the following statement – In the view of the Employment and Social Security Committee the provisions of the Draft Non-Contributory Pensions (Repeal) (Jersey) Law 200- are compatible with the Convention Rights.

(Signed) Senator P.F. Routier

REPORT

In 1951, the Insular Insurance Law came into force, and amongst other things, provided for an age pension to be paid to individuals dependant on the payment of contributions. At that time, the States agreed that a full pension could be paid if ten years of contributions were paid. (The 10 year period gradually increased as the scheme matured) It was recognised that a group of people would never be able to pay sufficient contributions into the Insular Insurance Scheme, because they were already close to reaching pension age. In 1954, the States formalised the protection of this group of people through the Non-Contributory Pension Law, which basically topped up a person's income to the level of an Insular Insurance Person. The basic criterion for the pension, over means testing, was that a person must have been over the age of 55 on 10th September 1951, that is born before 10th September 1896.

Obviously as time has passed, the number of people qualifying under this Law has dwindled from hundreds to none, and there cannot be any new claims. To receive the benefit a person must now be over 107 years old. The last claimant to a Non-Contributory Pension died in 2001.

The Employment and Social Security Committee is asking the States to repeal this piece of legislation which has served its purpose of protecting a dwindling out specific group of people over the past 50 years. The repeal of the legislation has no manpower or financial consequences.

Article 16 of the Human Rights (Jersey) Law 2000 will, when brought into force by Act of the States, require the Committee in charge of a Projet de Loi to make a statement about the compatibility of the provisions of the Projet with the Convention rights (as defined by Article 1 of the Law). In the view of the Employment and Social Security Committee the provisions of the Draft -Non Contributory Pensions (Repeal) (Jersey) Law 200- are compatible with the Convention.
