

This project is beginning to resemble the new police station, built in the wrong place entirely but one, or more, politicians are determined this is where it should go.

The cost of this fiasco is completely outrageous and will be borne by the already over-taxed public for many years.

The staffing problems being experienced by the current hospital staff will not go away within a new building. We appear to be blindly following the NHS even though that system is not working in the UK. More and more managers, not enough staff is the problem. We need a hospital run by medical professionals, they will determine what hospital we need and it's certainly not a carbuncle on the top of Westmount.

Now it appears we are being threatened that the cost will increase unless we push it forward, now where have I heard that before!!

Stop it now please, stop building finance offices, as many people will be working from home, and build the hospital on the waterfront. Oh yes, wasn't that the original recommendation by consultants we paid for their opinions.

Valerie Haines